The plan is being discussed in Bosrecently started by Cornell University.

President W. E. Huntington of Boston University says he is in favor of such a system, but doubts the feasibility-of it as applied to the smaller colleges. The small college, he says, system requires in sending one or more of its professors away for any length of time. Even though the small college receives able men in return it is unlikely that they would have the same sympathy in the work of the visited institution. As applied to the large univer sities with corresponding faculties President Huntington thinks a systematic exchange of professors would result most beneficially.

President F. W. Hamilton of Tufts says that an exchange among the colleges in this country should be encouraged, especially between colleges distant from each other, thereby bringing the various sections of the country into closer touch and sympathy with each in the North and the South and the den A. ANN ARBOR, Mich.-The University of Michigan track team is now holding outdoor practise every day on Ferry Field. At present special attention is being given to the candidates for the big University of Pennsylvania athletic carnival, in which this university will enter at least one relay team. Coach Fitzpatrick is giving special attention to such as are trying for the special events and the one and four-mile relay teams.

Although the two-mile relay team won that event at Philadelphia, last year, there is little chance of one being entered in this event this year. ### STANDARD OIL DEFENSE MAKES SWEEPING DENIAL OF CHARGES

ST. LOUIS, Mo .- Attorney John H. Milburn, counsel for the Standard Oil Company, today resumed his argument for the defense in the government suit r cking to dissolve the New Jersey corp-

Mr. Millburn denied the allegations of the government that the oil combination is a trust. He replied in detail to the charges of Charles B. Morrison for the government that the oil company maintains a spy system, bribes men to pose as independent dealers in order to procure legislation hurtful to independents and helpful to the trusts; that it paid a kwyer $500 to get a bill through the Georgia Legislature; that it organizes bogus companies which pretended to fight it when actually aiding the Standard and operating on its money. He repudiated the attitude of the government in its legal view that the Standard is a harmful trust by showing how its great system carries American industry to Russia, Germany, England and other countries.

He argued that great success like that of John D. Rockefeller begets jealousy. He said that rivals have taken advantage of today. He will make a sweeping degive false evidence against the oil com-

STOPPING PLACE IN

Haymarket square has been restored to street traffic, the openings that were made to facilitate the subway extension work having been closed, with two exceptions, which are comparatively small. The Haymarket station, from being merely one of a series of ordinary subway stations, has been amplified to the importance of an underground raiiway center, with six electric railway tracks, three distinct stations and several station platforms.

From side to side it is 130 feet wide, and each platform for the surface tracks is 300 feet long It will be the busiest and perhaps the largest station in the subway system of Boston, unless, eventually, it is surpassed by the Park street

Haymarket square constitutes the roof for this new station. It is undermined from curb to curb; the whole area from the relief station at one end to the junction of Union street with Washington street at the opposite end, and crosswise from Cross and Blackstone streets to Merrimac street, is used for station purposes, the roof upheld by rows of columns and serving as roof for the subway station and as floor for the surface traffic.

LOST BY TREATY Running through this station are six tracks. Two of them run between two platforms and will be used by the surface cars; on the outside of each of those platforms there is a single track, now used for surface cars, but intended for Have Dominion's Interests the East Cambridge extension of the elevated structure. #### Hotel Seeks to Buy Unique Clock Which Shows Fleet and Two Figures in Motion

NEW YORK - Negotiations are under way by the management of the Hotel St. Regis for the purchase of a unique clock which the maragement hopes to have in the hotel as an Easter surprise for its patrons. The clock was made in a little Ohio town by a workman who spent four years in its construction, and whose only tools were a scroll saw, a jack knife and a file.

By watching the clock one sees handsome pictures of the ships in the United States navy pass behind a glass. The history of Christ Jesus is shown from the nativity to the ascension by pictures painted by the maker.

An interesting feature of the clock is a miniature Niagara falls, with real water, the color of which appears to change. When the clock strikes the hour the figures of Uncle Sam and the Goddess of Liberty pass out of an electric elevator on one side, down a stairway, around the base of the miniature cataract and electric fountain to the other side, where they ascend another stairway and enter another elevator. A minute after the hour strikes 50 lights appear around the dial and a musical attachment is brought into play, sending forth delightful airs.

"RIGOLETTO." The Duke ..... Constantino Sparafucile ......de Segurola Monterone ...... Gilbert

THE second Tuesday night of the Manhattan season, like the first, was primarily not an operatic but a social event. The subject of the evening's entertainment happened to be Verdi's "Rigoletto," with Madame Tetrazzini in the leading part, but the character of the audience and their disposition toward the work done on the stage probably would have been just the same if their diversion had been Mr. Hammerstein's favorite "Otello" or his "Samson and Delilah," with one of the company's lesser singers in the lead. The night was Tuesday night, when, for reasons which those who are authority on matters social can explain, Boston people go to the opera. The audience was the largest, and except that of exactly a week before, the most inclined to sociability of any that Mr. Hammerstein's season has called out. Conversation in the corridors between the acts was the great business of the evening, and the talk of the people grouped on the stair-case and at the foot of it has never been more animated nor has more time ever been required for the audience to reassemble after the bell warned them back to their seats.

Although Mr. Hammerstein's cast for "Rigoletto" contains the two best singers he has and one of his most conscientious actors, yet it yielded the slenderest parents still live. results in performance of anything that has yet been given. transcendental for me. Is it not some thing that transcends this poor, fleeting, material existence that humanity longs for and needs? Christian Science is transcendental, because never was there every act transcending material laws and limitations. Throughout the progress of thought during the centuries, the great thinkers, seers, and prophets have caught glimpses of the great fact that the spiritual alone is real. Socrates, Fichte, Carlyle, Emerson, all announce this glorious glimpse of Truth; but beyond this, that every ray of light from the infinite source rarefied the atmosphere of human thought, it has had no practical results for humanity. Jesus brought his transcendentalism down to sad humanity to raise the dead, and in deed to transcend every sense of Love's one desires in the very extensive line that Chandler & Co. are showing at their Easter millinery sale this year. But many as there are, it is not the number that is the accentuated point of this firm's hat department; it is style and variety. The prices in many of their imported hats run from $50 to $150. Among their $38 hats are the Neapolitan Cavalier, Charlotte Corday, French plumed picture and the French braid directoire. For $15 one can buy a Charlotte Corday sailor, a Tuscan picture hat or a French flower hat. This firm carries one of the most complete line of ladies' waists in town, of various prices and in a multitude of materials, including net, lace, marquisette, pongee, crepon, linen and lingerie. In the suit department are plain tailored suits, of excellent cut, ranging in price from $25 to $45. The evening and dinner gowns displayed in the suit departments are of great beauty, and some very attractive gowns are found below the $60 mark, John Singleton Copley and Gilbert Stuart while many others are as high as $185, are among the many art treasures of-

THE LATEST AND GREATEST TRIUMPH IN VACUUM CLEANING The Thurman Portable Electric Vacuum Cleaner This latest triumph of the THURMAN SYSTEM is not a toy, and is built by the largest manufacturers of house-cleaning machinery in the world. It is the result of years of experience in designing, building and operating all classes of compressed air and vacuum cleaning machinery.

of years of experience in designing, building and classes of compressed air and vacuum cleaning machinery.

It can be moved about the house from room to room easily and without trouble, as it is light and readily portable. The power is obtained by connecting the motor with any electric socket. One person aloue is used to operate it, at a cost of only a few cents per day. With this machine the housemaid can absolutely clean the carpets from each particle of dust or deposit, making the house thoroughly sanitary—removing all the dust, dirt, grime, moth eggs and vermin in a remarkably short time, and without any of the disturbance of the old method of without any of the disturbance of the old method of beating, wearing, tearing and brushing. She accomplishes the triple feat of sweeping, renovating and dusting at the same time. The dust and dirt is collected in a tank on the machine, which can be emptied at will, it is especially designed for the home, but it is equally useful, sanitary and economic in offices, for school buildings, public halls and theaters.

This machine will do more to add to the health and general pleasure of the entire family than any other article that could be purchased.

NEW YORK STOCKS NEW CONVERTIBLE

Southern Pacific's New Issue Is of Much Interest to the Holders of the Preferred and Common Stock.

RECEIPTS LARGER

A good deal of interest is centered in the new Southern Pacific convertible 20year 4 per cent bonds, not only on account of the bonds themselves, but because of the effect they will have upon the common and preferred stocks of the company. The earnings of the company have been very satisfactory and for some time past have been improving rapidly. The total issue of the bonds is to be $82,000,000. The privilege will be given to the stockholders of the preferred and common stocks of the company to subscribe at 96 per cent with an adjustment of accrued interest on or before April 20, 1909, to the extent of 30 per cent of their respective holdings of the stock of the company.

The bonds will be converted at the option of the holder at any time after issue and prior to June 1, 1919, into paid-up shares of the common stock of the company at 130 per share. The entire issue may be called for redemption on March 1, 1914, or on any semi-annual interest date thereafter on 90 days' notice at 105 and accrued interest, but if so called the bonds may be converted up

EQUIPMENT AND RAILS ORDERED

MONTREAL-The Grand Trunk Pacific has given an order to the Montreal Locomotive Works for 25 8-wheel engines to be built July next.

The road has also placed orders with the Algoma Sault Ste. Marie Steel Company for 22,000 tons of 80-pound steel rails, and with the Dominion Steel & Iron Company for 13,000 tons of 80 pound steel rails and 2000 tons of 60pound steel rails.

To tell what a thing does counts for more than to describe its qualities.

But this convincing verb is not the action. "verb-of-all-work," such as "is," "seems," becomes," "grows," says a recent writer in the Atlantic. Writers are more rarely gifted with verbs than with other parts of speech. "Examine the works of writers who move you and you will find that they write in words of motion, that is, in verbs." The Atlantic's verb-champion then quotes a bit of Kipling's "Naulahka," to "show how the adjective-intoxicated amateur does not write":

A Glimpse of the Cubans

A lady who has lived in Cuba writes to the Sun:

I never saw anything but the greatest docility and patient submission, kindliness and hospitality in the Cubans. I have ridden, driven, motored, and, most novel from a Cuban standpoint, have walked in all parts of the island, and have only known smiles and good nature. Even at the time of the reconcentration, when our door was always thronged with patiently awaiting supplicants for food, there were never any threats, angry words, rough behavior or thefts. I have never seen a drunken Cuban. True, the children call after us, but in the dearest little voices, saying "Goodby," which we knew meant their salutation "adios," used before as well as after a meeting. Whenever we met a peasant of any age who was carrying flowers, a few were always pressed into our hands, and I have had mine so filled during my rides that I could hardly hold my reins; and there is no hut in Cuba so humble that the traveler who stops to inquire the way will not be offered coffee, or declining that, fresh cocoanut water, and the only way in which money will be accepted for such service is when it is given to the babies.

A Gift to Tuskegee

Booker Washington writes to the New York Times that in answer to his appeal for an increased endowment for the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, in memory of Abraham Lincoln, two friends in New York have just given $6000. They have given this with the hope that other friends may feel inclined to add something to the endowment in memory of Lincoln or in memory of some of their friends. Other individuals have also given smaller amounts in answer to the appeal.

The joy you win through selfless living; lasts more than a day: it abides forever, for it becomes a part of you. You engage in selfish pleasure today, and tomorrow finds you disconsolate. But do an unselfish act; speak a kind word, love some cue whom you think you dislike, and prove your love worthy the name: and there remains with you a fragrance from that act or that word, and from that love that all the cares of tomorrow cannot eliminate. Pleasure may be bought, but it dies with the day. Joy is priceless: it is born in selfless souls and is immortal .- J. Edward Smith.

The Balance of Power

For many centuries the storm area of European politics was an imaginary line, like the equator, drawn through the continent and known as the balance of power. To keep their neighbors properly grouped on either side of this line, so that the political balance might swing evenly, was the motive of European governments, directed by their jealousies and their fears. For this they fought and negotiated incessantly; indeed, it may safely be said that the preventive measures were far more costly than the struggle with the accomplishment would have been. The accomplishment, as a matter of fact, took place periodically, in spite of all the preventive measures. It took place when Spain, in the figure of the Colossus of Rhodes, got astride the old and the new worlds; when the Grand Monarque indulged in that magnificent effort of "thrasonical brag," "There are no longer any Pyrenees," and when Napoleon was distributing the thrones of Europe among his relatives. With Napoleon safely disposed of in St. Helena, the idea suffered a partial eclipse. It cannot be pretended, however, that anything so serious happened as in the halcyon days of prevention. The United Kingdom withdrew deliberately into what has been described as a condition of "glorious isolation," and though Bismarck did something to revive the old system, it never really became actively operative.

The recent crisis in the Balkans has perhaps done more than is superficially apparent to disturb the currents of European diplomacy. A fresh grouping of the powers is beginning to manifest itself, and that grouping threatens to extend itself beyond Europe. Little more than a name has been altered in Austria's relationship to Bosnia and Herzegovina, but the method by which that alteration was obtained, and not the alteration itself, has cost her the friendship of the United Kingdom and the practical severance of the Triple Alliance. Meanwhile the United Kingdom and Russia have reached a modus vivendi the effect of which is already being felt in a slackening of the bonds between the former country and Japan; if indeed a lasting arrangement can be reached by St. Petersburg and London with respect to Central Asia and Persia, it is obvious that the raison d'etre of the Anglo-Japanese alliance would have disappeared. If Japan desired a new ally she could find one in Germany alone, between whom and herself, by the irony of diplomacy, there stands the denunciations of the Kaiser. The alliances of yesterday, in a word, built up with such cost and labor, are vanishing, like thousands before them, because they were founded on the sands of fleeting political necessities rather than on the rock of Principle.

No doubt the alliances of the past represented the best the statesmen of the world saw their way to accomplishing in the interests of the nations committed to their charge. The ententes of today are a distinct advance on these, for they are aimed at the removal of the misunderstandings and the destruction of the causes for friction among nations, whereas the old alliances were commonly conceived indirectly for their perpetuation. The teachings of Christianity which have been warped in a mistaken effort to buttress the fortunes of some particular church or country are beginning to permeate once more the life of Christendom with their healing message. The parliament of man and the federation of the world are no longer regarded as the mere figments of a poet's fancy. In the light of the teachings of Christian Science thousands of people are coming to see that there is a way, and an immediate way, by which the brotherhood of man can be established, and that that way is the

THAT American coal in large quantities is being sold to Europe is in itself surprising enough, but the main significance of this transaction seems to lie in its bearing upon the ocean carrying trade and its relation to the American merchant marine. It is safe to say that most of the 20,000,000 tons of West Virginia coal that has been contracted for by southern Europe will be carried in foreign bottoms. It may even be no exaggeration to say that probably not a ton of this huge supply will go across the ocean in American vessels. That this will be true, that conditions are such that it will be inevitably true, must be cause for deep concern to all who are capable of giving the subject thoughtful and unprejudiced consideration. There can be no doubt that this little transaction in coal alone would be immensely profitable to the shipping interests engaged in its transportation, inasmuch as it is stated that the coal-carrying ships have guarantees of full cargoes of English ore on the return trip. This is but an incident in an epoch of vast international commercial activity, but it contains its warning. The encouragement and upbuilding of a splendid merchant marine would at the very least be as creditable to us as a nation, as is the feverish striving to build a great navy of warships; and if the example of the greatest maritime nation the world has ever known is worth anything, we shall lose no time in making possible an American merchant marine that will be a valuable national asset in peace or war.

Slave-Grown Cocoa

In the year 1905 Mr. Joseph Burtt and Dr. W. Claude Horton were commissioned by the principal cocoa firms of England and Germany to visit the Portuguese pos-sessions in the islands of St. Thome and Principe, on the west coast of Africa, with a view to investigating the conditions of indentured labor as employed on the cocoa estates, and also the methods by which it was recruited on the mainland. After a very careful investigation, extending into two years, these gentlemen came to the conclusion that there was perilously little difference between indentured or slave labor. In consequence of their report Mr. William A. Cadbury of the great cocoa firm of Cadbury Brothers, in England, visited Lisbon, in December, 1907, with a view to influencing the government to institute what the group of firms which he represented regarded as necessary reforms. His visit was on the whole satisfactory, and the promises made to him seemed to meet the requirements which he had put forward. When, in the following year, it began to be rumored that the terms of service on the plantations remained unaltered, Mr. Cadbury, at the desire of the united firms, himself paid a visit to the islands, in company with Mr. Burtt. A second careful investigation, not only in the islands themselves but on the mainland, during a period of five months, satisfied him that no proper steps had been taken to remedy the evils enumerated in the earlier report of Mr. Burtt and Dr. Horton. His own supplementary report has now been issued to the firms he represented, and, as a result, they have come to the conclusion that "the time has now arrived when they must mark, by definite action, their disappointment at the failure of the Portuguese government to fulfil the pledges of reform, on the strength of which they agreed for a time to continue commercial relations with the islands." In consequence the nine firms in the coalition, which represent the greatest cocoa interests in the United Kingdom and on the continent, have closed their dealings with the cocoa growers in the islands, though they have been careful to explain that they "will watch with sympathetic interest any efforts which may be made by the Portuguese government or by the estate proprietors to remedy the evils of the existing system, and will be prepared to reconsider their decision as to purchase when they are satisfied that such reforms have been carried out as to secure to the indentured laborers from Angola, not merely on paper but in actual fact, freedom in entering into the contract of service and full opportunity of returning to their homes when the contract expires." The action of these firms is a lesson in the practical ethics of trade, and is in itself a sign of the growing sense of responsibility for the methods employed. The old laissezfaire system is passing rapidly away. Men no longer shift the burden from their own shoulders with the convenient phrase, "Am I my brother's keeper?" They recognize that their duty toward God entails a duty toward their neighbor, and that unless this duty is fulfilled, to the best of their ability, they will never be able to say, "The kingdom of God is within me."

It is plain that many of the southern congressional districts are urging their representatives to be less disposed toward "regularity" than they used to be, the South being less disposed toward regularity

Speeding, Sailing or Flying

COLONEL BADEN-POWELL is one of the foremost among the air-navigation optimists of the period. In an article contributed to the National Review he sees nothing but progress in this interesting field of endeavor, and along lines, too, which help to make aeronautics interesting to all. During the present year Colonel Baden-Powell expects to see new records created with aeroplane machines and new devices brought forward for their improvement. He thinks we may have flights of three or four hours' duration; journeys over a hundred miles through the air. Before the close of the year he rather expects the English Channel to be crossed by one of these machines, and he expresses the hope "that Englishmen will not be behind in producing good appliances."

So much for 1909. In 1910 he looks for further developments, especially with regard to the number of machines which will be in use. On the continent there will be scores of them; at present fifty of the Wright type are said to be in course of construction. Next year exciting races will undoubtedly take place and cross-country journeys will be numerous. There will be a general improvement of

By 1911 most people in England, he believes, will have seen fliers in the air, and a great many of the more adventurous people will have made, flights on their own account. Aerial racing will become a regular sport. Flying machines will become much more common than balloons are today. Cross-channel trips will be matters of course. And then-

At this rate, in four years' time we may be able to say that flying is common. It may perhaps still be looked upon as a somewhat venturesome practise, and among the general community may not be exactly 'n everyday experience, but most well-to-do people will have made a trip, and many will own machines and make almost daily runs. It will be "quite the thing" to take your friends

So that those of us who do not own automobiles or motor boats eight years from now, say, should at least be owners of plain but substantially constructed aeroplanes, in which we may fly or float, as the case may be, through vast areas of week-end space.

"Here one feels the thrill of vitality." -Ettore Ximenes.

IN LATE years America has not infrequently received the visits of distinguished specialists from abroad, who, though teachers at old founts of knowledge, yet came to learn from the new ones. In every field of masterful activity the scions of the pioneers who had cut their way from ocean to ocean were proud to show the inquiring visitor achievements commensurate with the expanse of their native land, born of the forces subdued and harnessed, typical of a race that has reared a gigantic social fabric.

For art alone an old world cult was claimed; the ambitious American thought to find inspiration only where the great masters had found it before him. And suddenly the tide has turned; a celebrated artist from the classic shores, from the cradle of modern art, the Mecca of artists and art lovers, has come to learn American methods and organization of schools of design and applied art. Ettore Ximenes, sculptor, painter and engraver, famous throughout the Latin world, emphasizes the event by reminding us that this is the first time that the Italian government has sent any one abroad on such a mission. "America has made extraordinary progress in painting and sculpture, and in engraving it is in the lead

What is the secret the stranger from the home of culture and taste is so eager to learn? When he sailed up New York bay, he tells us, he saw power in the looks of everything, a great force compelling activity. His own bay of Naples at once tose up in comparison, and he saw the secret; there the effect is one of exquisitely beautiful coloring, "here one feels the thrill of vitality" -that vitality which knows not the weight of fictitious problems born of tradition, which is not cramped by accumulated perplexities, that vitality of the new land of which a famous Australian sculptor recently said that being so much older than the old lands because yet intact, it gave the growing artist an emotion and a focus of his own which silenced all regrets that he had been reared far from the old centers of art. It is this vitality that the American artist is destined to give the world when the great gall is sounded for purity in art.

During the campaign for government ownership of telephones in Manitoba, an authority quoted often and widely was Paul Latzke's well-known work, "The Fight with the Octopus." Mr. Latzke is editor of the Telephone Securities Weekly of New York, and is recognized as a most ardent and vigorous advocate of public ownership. The arguments advanced in his book did much toward bringing about the absorption of the telephones by the government of Manitoba. In a recent issue of the Telephone Securities Weekly, however, the first year's operation of the system in the province under government control is discussed under such startling and disappointing headlines as: "Blow to Government Ownership in Canada-Results of First Year's Operations of Manitoba System, Bought by Province from Bell Company, Held to Indicate a Loss Instead of a Net Surplus-No Provision Made for Depreciation or Other Reserves for Plant Claimed to be Practically Obsolete. Resolution to Investigate Purchase, Held to Have Been Tainted, Defeated in Legislature.

The article which follows justified the headlines, in so far as its assertions and figures go, and the conclusion which it draws is that "instead of rightly showing a profit and a net surplus from the first year's operations, the government's figures should indicate a deficit of something like $200,000."

The impartial and calm observer will agree with the writer of the article—which of course, must have had the approval of Mr. Latzke-that, assuming the statements made to be based on fact, "this is not a favorable showing for government ownership of a most important utility."

And yet the point which it makes most prominent is that public ownership, to be successful, must cast all sentimentality aside and conduct itself along the lines of private ownership. Neither Canadians nor Americans need be informed that if public ownership is to succeed it will be through the application of business methods such as those which obtain in the conduct of successful private enter-

THE FILIPINOS need not be discouraged if independence is not pledged to them at once. They should feel greatly cheered that the people of the United States are beginning to regard the independence of the islands in the near future as a matter of course.

THE VALUE of wireless telegraphy will, of course, be greatly enhanced when the secrecy of messages can be assured. And it is along this line that the most important improvements of the near future will be made.

The Flow of the Export Trade

WHATEVER conclusions or lessons may be drawn locally from the figures showing the exports and imports through the leading ports of the United States, statistics concerning which have only recently been made public, the facts themselves, as indicating the tendency of trade to find new channels, are instructive as well as interesting. The aggregate exports of the country for the year named were $1,752,000,000. Of these $636,000,000, or considerably more than one-third, were shipped by way of New York. The imports of the year aggregated $1,116,000,-000. More than one half of these, or imports to the value of $650,-000,000 came in through the port of New York.

The metropolis, it will be seen, is far ahead of any other city in the matter of foreign commerce. Until this year, Boston for a long time has held second place. It still holds second place for imports; for exports, however, it has been passed by both New Orleans and Galveston. In 1908 Galveston had exports to the value of $202,000,000, New Orleans to the value of $96,000,000, and Boston to the value of $84,000,000.

A fact worthy of notice is that, during the year named, Galveston had imports only to the value of $4,000,000, but her lead in exports was great enough to make her total commerce greater than

The growth of the export trade of New Orleans and Galveston is due to a long-continued, steady and determined effort in the Mississippi valley to find outlets for its products through Guif ports. Threatened with waterway competition the north-aud-south railroad lines finally made favorable terms with shippers. It is estimated that 60 per cent of the country's exports are produced in the Mississippi river region, and it only required a change of route for a part of these to build up the export business of the two Gulf ports

There are natural reasons, perhaps, why the products of the Mississippi valley should seek ports in the Gulf of Mexico, but neither Galveston nor New Orleans has depended upon them; at least, not in recent years. On the contrary they have provided every possible artificial inducement for trade that ingenuity and enterprise could invent or promote. And they have found faithful auxiliaries in the railroads. The north-and-south lines between Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and the Gulf have spared nothing in the movement to divert the trade of the territory which they serve from the Atlantic to the Gulf routes.

Whether the present flow of exports toward the Gulf ports shall continue and increase will depend to a very large degree upon the attitude of the Atlantic ports and the east-and-west railway lines toward the matter. Two things, however, are evident-the drift at present is southward and strongly so, and to check it and turn it the efforts put forth must be not only extraordinary but prompt.

WHEN the tariff shall be agreed upon, and the country has settled to its usual business once more, it might then be in order for people who do not take kindly to high protective duties to cease applauding schemes for national expenditures which make high protective duties seem necessary.

IF COLLECTOR LOEB shall succeed in collecting the $2,390,000 in back duties which he is after, the question will arise whether he is not more useful in the custom house even than he was in the White House.
